大問4A Science project

メールを読み、次ページのQ23-Q25に答えなさい。

From: Leo Tomlin
To: Mary Britton
Date: October 6
Subject: Science project

You were absent from school yesterday, so you don't know about our science project. We have to make a group presentation next Wednesday, and you are my partner. Mrs. Jones asked us to choose a type of bird and then search for information about how these birds live and what they eat. I chose penguins because I'm really interested in them. I hope that's OK with you.

We started writing in class. I finished writing about where penguins live. I have also started to prepare pictures for our presentation. We have to have at least ten pictures for the presentation. I will prepare the first five, and you can do the rest. Can you research the food the penguins eat? You need to write around 150 words in addition to preparing pictures for the presentation.

Let's meet on Monday so we can work together. I am free after school because there is no soccer practice that day. Can you meet me in the library? Don't forget your computer. We need to show our work to Mrs. Jones before Wednesday's presentation.

大問4B 長文

本文を読み、次ページのQ26-Q29に答えなさい。

Circles in the Sand

In 1995, divers swimming in the ocean near southern Japan discovered something unusual. They saw large circles drawn in the sand at the bottom of the sea. The divers did not know what had caused these circles. However, the mystery was eventually solved by some scientists who saw the circles being drawn. The artist was a male fish called a puffer fish. He was using different parts of his body to create the circles. When his work was complete, a female came and laid her eggs in the center.

The puffer fish is not the only animal that creates beautiful art. A bird called the bowerbird is another example. They gather colorful objects to build a structure called a "bower." This structure looks like a nest. Other animals perform "art" that looks like songs or dances. These animals do not make art for pleasure. The purpose is to attract a partner. There is a risk for animals doing this because it can attract attention from dangerous animals.

It is almost always males that perform these behaviors rather than females. Instead, the female watches the male perform and decides whether to choose him as a partner. That is because scientists believe that the quality of a male animal's art or performance is often a good way for the female to select the healthiest male. Females want to choose healthy males because their babies will be stronger and healthier, too.

In the case of the puffer fish, scientists still do not really know how females choose the best males. Perhaps they choose the most beautiful circle or the circle on the softest sand. One idea is that the circles provide ideal conditions for puffer fish eggs to grow. Sadly, the circles do not last long. They always make a new circle each time they look for a partner.
