A New Service on the Mountain

In the early 2020s, the Tanzanian government installed high-speed Internet access points on Mount Kilimanjaro for people to use. The first one was set up at Horombo Huts, high on the mountain's slopes. Later, more access points were placed along the climbing route. This made it easier for climbers to contact their guides and request rescue in case of emergencies. It also enabled mountain workers to communicate about navigation and to (18). This can prepare them for sudden changes on the mountain, ensuring their safety.

Another purpose of making the Internet available on Mount Kilimanjaro was to boost the tourism industry. Mount Kilimanjaro has long been a popular tourist destination, attracting many visitors from around the world. Tourists can now post pictures and videos during their climb. (19), they can share their experiences in real time and show the challenges they had on the mountain. Fortunately for tourists, Internet access on Mount Kilimanjaro has now been expanded all the way to its summit.

However, not everyone was happy. Some critics said the government was giving more attention to tourists. Many rural communities in Tanzania (20). Therefore, there were criticisms that the resources should be used more to improve communication services for local residents. On the other hand, some people welcomed the new service for its safety benefits and emergency communication on the mountain. In short, the project has caused debate, but it has also changed how people stay safe while climbing Mount Kilimanjaro and how they share their journeys in real time.

Bats

Bats play an important role both for the natural environment and people's lives. They eat many insects, such as flies and moths, that harm plants. Since one bat can eat thousands of insects a night, farmers can reduce the amount of chemicals they use on their crops. In addition, bats help many plants grow by (21). This allows new plants to start growing far from the parent plant. Unfortunately, bat populations are falling across the globe. If the number continues to decline, a serious problem might occur for the environment and food production.

In some parts of North America, many bats are dying from a disease called white-nose syndrome. The name comes from white marks on the faces or wings of sleeping bats. It spreads in the caves and tunnels where bats sleep for the winter. The disease wakes up the bats from their winter sleep. (22), once awake, they begin to move around, causing them to lose the body fat that they have stored. Since there are not enough food sources during the winter, many bats end up dying.

Scientists and activists are taking various measures to protect the bat population. For example, they enter caves in winter to count and monitor the bats. Special habitats, such as artificial caves, have also been created to give bats safe places to rest. Also, experts are studying what various bats need to (23). They attach small tracking devices to monitor their activities and understand how these bats maintain energy during the winter months.

大問3A Question about some furniture

メールを読み、次ページのQ24-Q26に答えなさい。

From: Katy Lewis <klewis@moonwave.com>
To: George Henderson <ghenderson@earthlinker.com>
Date: February 8
Subject: Question about some furniture

Dear George Henderson,
My name is Katy Lewis, and I run a craft shop in the neighboring city. We are going to renovate our shop and want to give away some of the furniture. Currently, we have some tables and shelves. We'll no longer need them as the shop's layout is being changed. The furniture is all in good condition, and I thought a secondhand shop like yours might be able to accept it.

We have five pieces in total. They are made of wood and are not too big, just the right size for a regular-sized shop. They have some scratches, but not large scratches that require repair. Even though each one isn't very large, all five together are still too heavy to carry without a truck. Could you come to pick them up? Would there be a cost for doing that?

In case you are unable to accept the items, I will need to check whether other shops might want them. I don't want to throw the items away if someone can still use them. Contacting other shops and waiting for their replies may take some time, so I would appreciate it if you could let me know soon. Since the renovation crew will start working in two weeks, please let me know what you think about this by this Friday.

Sincerely,
Katy Lewis
Moonwave Craft Shop

大問3A Question about some furniture

前ページのメールを読み、Q24-Q26に答えなさい。

(24) Why does Katy Lewis write this email to George Henderson?

1 Because she is searching for furniture that suits her new layout.
2 Because she is planning to sell her shop to someone in the city.
3 Because she wants to offer some used items for his shop.
4 Because she hopes to sell handmade items at his secondhand shop.

(25) Katy wishes somebody from George's shop would visit her because

1 she cannot transport all five items without the shop's help.
2 she cannot sell the items without having them checked beforehand.
3 the shop cannot receive her payment through an online system.
4 the shop cannot accept items delivered by mail or in person.

(26) Katy wants a reply by Friday because

1 she should close the shop permanently on that day as planned.
2 she may need time to ask other shops if they are interested.
3 the renovation team may want to use the furniture.
4 the renovation work will begin sometime this week.

Shopping Carts

The shopping cart was invented by Sylvan Goldman in the 1930s. He noticed that shoppers had difficulty continuing shopping because their baskets became too heavy to carry, and he looked for a solution. His first shopping cart was made of a simple chair that could be folded. It had two baskets and wheels. With this shopping cart, people did not have to carry heavy baskets anymore. They could push the cart instead. Soon after, he introduced the carts at his store and hoped to change the way people shopped.

Before the invention, people carried baskets around with their arms while shopping. Therefore, it was difficult to shop for many items at once, and they often stopped shopping once the basket was too heavy to carry. As supermarkets grew larger and more people began driving cars, people started buying more items in a single shopping trip. Shopping carts could be helpful to both shoppers, who could shop easily and conveniently, and supermarket owners, who could increase their sales.

However, at first, shoppers did not like using shopping carts. Some women thought shopping carts looked like baby strollers, which were used for carrying babies, and some men thought using the carts without holding baskets themselves would make them look less manly. Goldman had to find a clever way to change their minds. He hired people who walked around his store pushing the shopping carts and demonstrating how useful the carts were. When customers saw others using the carts comfortably, they started using them too. Soon, shopping carts became popular and widely accepted, and other stores wanted to buy them for their own customers.

Shopping carts have been improved over time. In the middle of the twentieth century, a new cart was designed so that many carts could be stored in a smaller area. Later, a safety belt for children's seats was also added as people looked for safer ways to shop with young children. Nowadays, millions of shopping carts are widely used in stores around the world. The invention of shopping carts made shopping much easier, allowed stores to grow larger, and fundamentally changed the way people buy groceries and other household goods.

大問3B 長文設問 Q27-Q31

前ページの本文を読み、最も適切なものを1つ選びなさい。

(27) The first shopping cart designed by Sylvan Goldman was

1 a rolling chair with one fixed basket that people could not fold.
2 a folding chair with wheels and two baskets used for easy shopping.
3 a chair with two handles that came off easily and four wheels.
4 a chair with one large basket under the seat and no wheels.

(28) Why did people start buying more items in a single shopping trip?

1 The size of the supermarkets and the number of shoppers with cars increased.
2 Supermarkets began to provide shopping baskets that shoppers could take home.
3 Store owners offered various discounts for those people who bought large amounts.
4 People's lifestyles became busier, and they could not find time for shopping.

(29) Goldman convinced shoppers to use shopping carts by

1 offering them special discounts for using the carts.
2 changing their design to make the carts more appealing.
3 showing men using the carts in the store in advertisements.
4 hiring people to demonstrate using the carts in the store.

(30) In the middle of the twentieth century,

1 shoppers had to pay an extra cost for using shopping carts inside supermarkets.
2 supermarkets prohibited young children from sitting in shopping carts.
3 shoppers could put more items in shopping carts because a new cart was designed.
4 supermarkets could save space for shopping carts thanks to the new cart design.

(31) Which of the following statements is true?

1 Shopping carts were thought to be beneficial for both shoppers and supermarket owners.
2 Shopping carts were invented so that people could buy large items like furniture.
3 Goldman's initial shopping cart design had a child seat with a safety belt.
4 Many women preferred to use their baby strollers as shopping carts.
