次の英文A, Bを読み, その文意にそって(26)から(30)までの()に入れるのに最も適切なものを1, 2, 3, 4の中から一つ選びなさい。

Horse Sense

When we are happy, angry, or sad, we show our feelings on our faces. By changing the shape of our eyes, mouth, and other parts of our face, we can show other people our feelings. Some animals do the same thing, too. Dogs, monkeys, and horses can show their feelings by using their faces.

Understanding others' feelings (28). If we see an angry face, we can try to be careful. If we see a kind face, we can start to make friends.

Recent research has found that horses can understand people's feelings by looking at their faces. Scientists showed large photographs of a person with either a happy face or an angry face to 28 horses. When the horses saw the angry face, they became afraid. The scientists knew the horses were afraid because they looked at the photograph (29). When a horse is scared of something, it will turn its head to the right and use its left eye to watch the thing.

Perhaps over thousands of years of working with humans, horses have become able to understand humans' faces. Dogs have the same ability, perhaps because they have also worked with humans for thousands of years. Another explanation is that the 28 horses in the study came from local riding schools, where many different students ride the horses every day. It is possible that these animals learned to guess people's feelings because they had (30) in their lives.

- 1 is not always useful 2 is often not easy 3 takes a long time 4 helps us stay safe

(29)

- 1 very carefully 2 several times 3 for less than one second 4 with their left eyes

(30)

- 1 many good friends 2 plenty of food 3 been to many places 4 seen a lot of people

大問4A Asian Tours

メールを読み、次ページのQ31-Q33に答えなさい。

From: Charles Baker <charlesbaker136@wanderworld.com>
To: Allison Carter <alli-carter@mymail.com>
Date: October 10
Subject: Asian tours

Dear Ms. Carter,

This is Charles, the travel agent at Wander World Tours. Thank you for contacting me yesterday about trips in Asia. You told me on the phone that you had a great time on our five-day Rhine River Tour in Germany last year. I thought about the things that you said you liked and didn't like about it.

I remember you said your favorite part about the Rhine River trip was visiting a new place every day. You also liked that you didn't have to spend time on buses, and it was nice because you didn't have to move your things to new hotels. However, you also said the price of $3,500 for the trip was too much, and the food was great but expensive.

Because of those things, I would like to recommend our Mekong River Tour in Vietnam. It lasts eight days and costs only $2,800. Also, we have one-city tours for some cities in Asia. With these, you can stay at the same hotel for the whole trip. The price is different for each city, so I'm sending you some information about these tours. They are attached to this e-mail. Please take a look at them and call me.

Thank you!

Sincerely,
Charles Baker
Wander World Tours

An Unusual Spice

Hing is a spice which is widely used in Indian cooking. Many traditional Indian dishes are made from vegetables like potatoes and beans, and hing is added to the dishes to give them a stronger flavor. However, hing has a very bad smell until it is added to food and heated. The smell is so bad that hing must be kept inside a closed box, or everything nearby will start to smell like it.

Hing is made from the juice of a plant called asafetida. This plant grows in dry, sunny places such as Iran, Afghanistan, and parts of China. Asafetida has a root like a carrot. When the plant is four years old, a hole is cut in the root, and a thick, sticky juice comes out - this is hing. This sticky juice soon dries and becomes hard. After that, it is often made into a powder before being sold.

Cooking hing in hot butter or oil changes it. The bad smell goes away, and hing gives a wonderful flavor to food. Many people say it tastes like cooked onions. It is not often used in Western food, probably because not many cooks know about it. However, hing has been used for many years to make Worcestershire sauce - a British sauce that adds flavor to foods. This sauce was first created by British people living in India.

There are other reasons for using hing, too. In the past, people wore small bags of hing around their necks to stop illnesses. Also, it has been taken as a medicine for hundreds of years to help with some stomach problems. In 1918, hing was used to fight a serious disease called Spanish flu. Recently, researchers have found that hing can actually protect people from diseases, so it seems that this unusual spice might become even more popular in the future.
