Unusual Pets

While most pet owners choose traditional pets such as dogs and cats, some people prefer to keep unusual pets. One kind of unusual pet is a tortoise. Tortoises look similar to turtles. However, tortoises live on land. Tortoises are easy to take care of because they move slowly and only need to eat things like leaves and flowers. Furthermore, they spend the winter months sleeping. They become active again when the weather becomes warmer. (18), tortoise owners only need to check on their pets once a day.

Skunks are small animals with black and white fur that are sometimes kept as pets. Wild skunks are famous for producing a liquid with a bad smell to protect themselves from attackers. If a skunk is to be kept as a pet, the part of its body that makes this liquid is removed by an animal doctor. Skunks can be fun pets because they are clever and they enjoy playing. However, they also (19). In the wild, skunks use these to dig holes in the ground. Inside a house, they can use them to open doors and refrigerators and cause trouble for their owners.

Another unusual pet is a wallaby. Wallabies come from Australia. They are similar to kangaroos but smaller. Just like kangaroos, wallabies stand on their back legs and use their front legs to (20). While they are young, they do this for fun, and this behavior can seem cute. However, if pet wallabies are not trained to stop doing this at an early age, they can end up hurting their owners.

大問2B 長文の語句空所補充 Q21-Q23

次の英文A，Bを読み，その文意にそって(18)から(23)までの( )に入れるのに最も適切なものを選びなさい。

Greener Grass?

Many US homeowners love having a beautiful yard, but having a yard covered in thick, green grass takes money and time. Chemicals are often added to keep the soil healthy so that the grass can survive cold winters and hot summers. Lately, however, more homeowners have been (21). Instead of trying to help the grass grow, they use a special paint to color it green. This creates the look of a healthy yard.

Grass paint has actually been available for over fifty years. At that time, it was mostly used to maintain sports fields and golf courses. Nowadays, (22) and environmental concerns about using chemicals have made it a popular choice for people. This is especially true in areas where the climate is becoming drier. In these areas, cities sometimes limit water usage when water supplies are low. This lack of water can turn yards brown, but grass paint can help hide this.

While painting a yard can make it look better, it takes a lot of work. The grass needs to be cut, and the yard needs to be painted again. Still, things have come a long way. In the past, grass paint was hard to use because it did not stick to the grass well. The color did not look natural, and it faded quickly. (23), a number of improvements were made. Today, homeowners have a variety of choices, including products made from natural ingredients that are not harmful to yards. Just like grass, it seems this trend will continue to grow.

1 dealing with wild animals　2 getting rid of their grass　3 trying a different approach　4 fighting against local laws

(22)

1 better advertising plans　2 more buying options　3 increased plant costs　4 frequent rain shortages

大問3A Museum Tours

メールを読み、次ページのQ24-Q26に答えなさい。

From: Barbara Miller <barbara.miller@whmuseum.org>
To: James Bowen <bowen-j@wallingtoncollege.com>
Date: June 1
Subject: Museum tours

Dear Mr. Bowen, Thank you for your e-mail. I would be very glad to hear that students at your college are coming here to the Wallington History Museum to help with museum tours. During this time of year, the museum gets many visitors, including young children on school trips. Because we only have a few tour guides, they often have to take care of very large groups, and this can be challenging for guides and inconvenient for visitors.

Before your students can give tours, they will need to be trained by our tour guides. The museum has five rooms, and each room covers a different period of history and contains about fifty items. It might be difficult for your students to learn about all the items in all the rooms, so I suggest that you divide your students into five groups, and the members of each group can learn about the items in one of the rooms.

I would like to have a meeting with you soon in order to set up a schedule for your students' training. Either I can go to your college, you can come here, or we can have an online meeting. I am usually busy on weekday mornings, so if you have some time on one afternoon next week, that would be better for me. I look forward to hearing from you soon. Sincerely, Barbara Miller Director Wallington History Museum

大問3A Museum Tours

前ページのメールを読み、Q24-Q26に答えなさい。

(24) What is one thing Barbara Miller mentions about tour guides at the museum?

1 Many of them studied history when they were in college.
2 They always look forward to showing schoolchildren around.
3 Many of them take time off work at this time of year.
4 They often must look after groups with many members.

(25) Barbara Miller advises Mr. Bowen to

1 separate his students into several groups.
2 teach about a different period of history.
3 speak to one of the museum's tour guides directly.
4 choose fifty items for his students to learn about.

(26) Barbara Miller says that she

1 would like to avoid having an online meeting.
2 wants to speak with Mr. Bowen to create a plan.
3 does not have much time on weekday afternoons.
4 is not sure how to get to Mr. Bowen's college.

大問3B 長文

本文を読み、次ページのQ27-Q31に答えなさい。

Chichén Itzá

Chichén Itzá is an ancient city in Mexico that contains some remarkable buildings. Construction of the city began around 1,500 years ago and was carried out by people of the Maya civilization. The site was probably first settled by the Maya people because it had a large, underground source of water, good soil for growing crops, and plenty of stone for building. For these reasons, the area was able to support a large population, and within a few hundred years, Chichén Itzá had become one of the most important Maya cities.

Among the people of the Maya civilization, there were great architects, artists, and scientists. They had observed that one year lasted 365 days, and they designed a building called the Temple of Kukulcán in Chichén Itzá to work as a calendar. It is believed that this temple was made so that a shadow on the temple in the shape of a snake's body joined up with statues of a snake's head on certain special days. Knowing such dates would help local farmers to know when to plant their crops.

The Temple of Kukulcán is also special for another reason. If a person stands in front of one of the temple's stairs and claps their hands, the echo sounds like the call of a bird called a quetzal. Quetzals are beautiful birds with bright green, red, and white feathers. The Maya people believed that these birds were the messengers of the gods. Clapping in front of the Temple of Kukulcán sounds as if the gods were talking to the Maya people through their messengers.

Sometime before European explorers first came to Chichén Itzá in the 16th century, the Maya people had left the city. Nobody is sure of the reason for this, but researchers are continuing to look for answers. These days, Chichén Itzá is a UNESCO World Heritage Site and a popular destination for tourists. However, the buildings have been closed to the public due to the damage caused by visitors. It is hoped that doing this will protect these wonderful structures for many years to come so that they can be studied and enjoyed.

大問3B 長文設問 Q27-Q31

前ページの本文を読み、最も適切なものを1つ選びなさい。

(27) What is one reason Chichén Itzá developed into a large city?

1 The site was at the meeting point of two important trails.
2 The area had natural resources for farming and construction.
3 The weather in the region was constant throughout the year.
4 The first leader of the Maya people had been born there.

(28) The design of the Temple of Kukulcán possibly helped

1 farmers living near Chichén Itzá to plan their work.
2 scientists to accurately record the movements of stars and planets.
3 the artists of Chichén Itzá to become the most famous in the Maya civilization.
4 the people living nearby to catch snakes for food.

(29) Why did the Maya people believe that birds called quetzals were special?

1 The birds built their nests on the steps of a temple.
2 The birds were thought to deliver messages from the gods.
3 The birds' calls sounded like the name of one of the gods.
4 The birds' feathers were needed for a ceremony at a temple.

(30) The buildings in Chichén Itzá were

1 destroyed by European explorers who wanted to find gold and jewels.
2 damaged when people took stones from them to build hotels for visitors.
3 closed to keep them safe for future generations of tourists and researchers.
4 hidden for many years after a thick forest grew up around them.

(31) Which of the following statements is true?

1 Construction of Chichén Itzá began 1,500 years before the Maya people arrived.
2 People of the Maya civilization knew the number of days in a year.
3 There is no echo if a person claps in front of the Temple of Kukulcán.
4 Researchers have recently discovered why the Maya people left Chichén Itzá.
