大問3C 長文

The Olympics

The Olympics are a famous sports competition. There are two types of Olympics, one in summer and one in winter. The Winter Olympics were first held in the 1920s, many years after the first Summer Olympics.

If the Olympics are in a city, many visitors go there and spend money on local goods. Governments often try to make their cities better to prepare for the Olympics. Some people are happy when the Olympics are in their city. However, many people think the Olympics make cities too crowded.

The first Olympic Games took place over 2,500 years ago in Olympia, Greece. These ancient Olympics were created to celebrate the Greek god Zeus. Athletes sometimes asked the gods to help them to win before taking part in the competition. In those days, there were some of the same sports as the modern Olympics, such as wrestling and running. However, the ancient Olympics were different from the modern Olympics. For example, they were only for men, and the athletes played without wearing clothes.

The Olympics continued for hundreds of years in Greece. Over time, the Olympics became more popular and included more events. However, they stopped after the Romans began controlling Greece. In 1894, people from countries such as France, Italy, and Spain went to Paris and decided to start holding the Olympics again. Two years later, the Olympics were held in Athens, Greece, in 1896. Four years later, the second modern Olympics were held in Paris, France. Since 1900, the Olympics have been held almost every four years.
