From: Steve Potter <steve.musiclover@mailme.com>
To: Jenny King <jennyk1234@zmail.com>
Date: June 1
Subject: A question

Hi Jenny, I hope you're having a good week. Last Saturday, I went to a market in my neighborhood, and it was amazing! I bought some records from the 1960s and 1970s. They sound great on my dad's old record player. Also, I got a couple of comic books. One of them is from the series that you were telling me about when I visited your house. I thought of you when I found them because I know how much you love comic books.

There's going to be another market next weekend in a different part of the city. I've heard it will be even bigger than the one last Saturday. There might be more records, comic books, and other interesting stuff to look at and buy. How about we go together and see what we can find? I think we'd have fun searching through the items, even if they're too expensive for us to buy.

Are you free next Saturday? The market is a little far away, but I asked my dad, and he said he would drive us there. We can go to a café for lunch and then take a bus back in the afternoon. Let me know what you think. Best wishes, Steve

Antoni Gaudí

Antoni Gaudí was born in Spain and became famous as a designer of buildings. As a child, Gaudí was often in poor health. He had to rest at his family's house in the countryside instead of going to school. While he was there, he enjoyed looking at nature. He got many ideas for his designs for buildings from nature. He thought that using natural shapes and colors, such as those of leaves and seashells, could give buildings a special beauty.

The Sagrada Família is a church in Barcelona that Gaudí designed. Although it is made from stone, glass, and metal, it looks like a picture of Gaudí's childhood memories. The towers of the Sagrada Família are like huge trees. Inside, the columns that support the roof make people feel like they are in a forest. Construction began in the late nineteenth century, but it has still not finished. Workers are using Gaudí's original designs to complete the building.

Park Güell is another place that Gaudí designed. The park is not just an area with trees and grass for people to walk, rest, and play. It also has strange, colorful objects and unusual buildings. For example, there is a long bench that looks like a snake. Because of these things, visiting the park can be a fun experience. Interestingly, there is a tall, pink building in the park called the Casa Museu Gaudí, where Gaudí lived for many years.

Even after Gaudí's death, his special approach to designing buildings is a source of ideas for designers around the world. Every year, many people visit Barcelona to see the Sagrada Família and the other buildings that Gaudí designed. These places have helped to make Barcelona famous as a center of art and design. Some of them are so important to the city that they have become UNESCO World Heritage Sites.
