大問4B 長文

本文を読み、次ページのQ26-Q29に答えなさい。

Working Styles

Many people around the world follow a working style based on forty hours a week. It was born in the United States about a century ago. In the early twentieth century, many people used to work ten to twelve hours a day. However, the long hours of work had a negative impact on both workers and how much work they could do. This led to the forty-hour workweek in the country, and it spread to other countries.

When it started, it seemed attractive to many workers. Thanks to this change, people were able to improve their physical and mental health. In addition, it gave them more time to spend with their families. They could also use their private time to improve other skills. For these reasons, the new working style allowed workers at that time to have a better balance between work and personal life.

In modern times, however, some people want even more personal time. This is how another working style, the four-day workweek, was born recently. In this working style, people focus on increasing how much they can do in short working hours while working four days a week. These workers believe that they can be more satisfied with their companies. In fact, some companies using this style have reported positive results or even increased profits.

However, the four-day workweek is not perfect for all workers. That is why companies allow workers to work different schedules to fit their personal lives. For example, some people work half days twice a week, while others work shorter hours five days a week. So, we may see that a lot of companies will have their own approaches to meeting the needs of workers in the future.

1 were forced to work more for their companies.
2 had the opportunity to earn more money.
3 were happy with the longer lunchtime.

(28) What effect has the four-day workweek had?

2 More workers started working longer hours each day.
