Accidents with Giant Animals

The moose is the biggest animal in the deer family. An adult moose is much larger than a human and can weigh several hundred kilograms. The antlers attached to its head are large and can reach almost two meters wide. Although the moose has a huge body, it can move very well. On land, the moose can run up to fifty kilometers per hour. (18), it is known as an excellent swimmer. It can travel long distances in lakes or rivers and even go completely under the water for many seconds.

Many accidents between car drivers and moose have been reported. In Canada, for example, such accidents happen throughout the year. Most of them occur (19). This is when the moose is most active. In particular, many crashes occur on clear nights and on straight roads. According to some studies, drivers are usually more careful when roads are curved or when the weather is poor. However, on clear nights, drivers often pay less attention. This can lead to accidents with the animal.

Another reason for moose accidents is (20). Because the moose has long legs, it is difficult for drivers to see its body within their vision. At night, drivers can usually see an animal's eyes reflecting a vehicle's headlights. However, a moose's eyes are generally positioned so high that the lights cannot reflect off them. In addition, its dark-colored fur makes it extremely hard to see at night. For these reasons, the chances of drivers hitting a moose on the road are high.

Lotus Leaves

The lotus is a water plant that grows in many parts of the world, especially in Asia. People in these areas have been growing the lotus for thousands of years. Various parts of the plant are used in cooking. For example, its roots are often added to soups. (21) being eaten, the lotus has long been part of traditional medicine because it can help treat sicknesses such as fever. Today, scientists are interested in another special feature of the lotus.

One unique feature of lotus leaves is their ability to (22). This feature helps prevent dirt from sticking to them. A lotus leaf has a very fine, bumpy surface, and it also produces a type of natural wax. This means that water that lands on the leaf stays in the form of drops. When the wind blows or gravity pulls them, these drops run down the leaf. As they move, the drops wash away dust and dirt. This helps the lotus stay clean even in muddy places.

This unique feature of lotus leaves has (23). Scientists have used similar ideas to create self-cleaning materials, such as glass, fabrics, and coatings for buildings. Some of these inventions can even repair minor surface damage, which enables them to last longer. Others help reduce the use of water and cleaning chemicals, which benefits the environment. These examples show that studying nature can lead to practical solutions for human problems, proving that a simple feature of a plant can have wide-ranging applications in everyday life.

大問3A Invitation to the award ceremony

メールを読み、次ページのQ24-Q26に答えなさい。

From: Kate Daniels <contact@saint-fall.com>
To: Marcus Jennings <m.jennings@speed-message.net>
Date: April 14
Subject: Invitation to the award ceremony

Dear Marcus,
This is Kate Daniels from Saint Fall City Hall. It was nice speaking with you on the phone last week. It was an honor to share the news that your artwork received a city award. It was chosen because of your great creativity. I'm writing today to inform you that the city has decided to hold an award ceremony in the Witmore Lobby, and we would like to invite you to attend.

The ceremony will take place on the evening of April 23. Other winners, family members, teachers, and city staff will also attend. Everyone will gather to celebrate art and young talent. You will receive your award on stage and have the chance to take photos with the mayor. In addition, there will be a short interview with city staff, and some of your comments will be published in the city's newspaper next month.

We have one more request. We hope that many people in the city will see and enjoy your work. Therefore, we are considering displaying it in the Witmore Lobby for some time after the ceremony. This will give the community an opportunity to enjoy your work and inspire other students. Please let us know if you agree to this so that we can start preparing for the display.

Thank you,
Kate Daniels

Staying on the Farm

Agritourism is a type of travel in which people visit farms or other countryside businesses to experience farm life, local culture, and food. Through these visits, travelers can enjoy hands-on activities, such as staying at a house on the farm, eating meals made from farm products, or participating in daily farm tasks like picking fruits and vegetables. Rather than being just a style of travel, agritourism offers a way to have authentic farm experiences while supporting local farmers.

This approach, which combines farming and tourism, can offer many advantages for both visitors and farmers. By understanding farming better, visitors, many of them from cities, can feel more connected to nature, which is good for their mental health. On the other hand, for farmers, it is a way to earn extra money and grow their businesses. It can also create new opportunities for the local economy. People from cities often visit local coffee shops, restaurants, and stores. In short, agritourism supports the whole community in many ways.

There are several reasons why agritourism has become more popular, especially among people in cities. One reason is the influence of social media and celebrities. Many celebrities share their farm experiences online, which encourages their fans to try the same. Another reason is that experts say people want to improve their mental well-being during vacations, which has increased interest in farm stays. This is likely to relate to the fact that many people want to escape the stress of modern life and crowded cities.

According to one study, the global agritourism market may reach around 200 billion dollars by 2032. This is almost three times the size of the market in 2019. Moreover, in recent years, more people have been enjoying longer stays on farms. In the United States, advertisements for farm stays increased by about 70 percent between 2019 and 2024. This may show that as people spend more time at home today, they are becoming more interested in spending time outside, especially in nature and farming.

大問3B 長文設問 Q27-Q31

前ページの本文を読み、最も適切なものを1つ選びなさい。

(27) What is true about agritourism?

1 It focuses on relaxing in nature, with little activity in farm work.
2 It offers visitors some lessons to prepare for a career in agriculture.
3 Visitors receive some money while staying on a farm to work.
4 Visitors experience a farm lifestyle through work or local food.

(28) What is one effect that agritourism brings?

1 It makes farmers rely on local businesses like coffee shops.
2 It helps farmers replace traditional farming with a tourism business.
3 It benefits visitors' mental well-being through contact with nature.
4 It encourages visitors to start new businesses in the countryside.

(29) One of the reasons agritourism is getting popular is that

1 people are influenced by farm experiences shared online.
2 people are worried about rising food prices in cities.
3 visitors are offered lessons to learn modern farming methods.
4 visitors are invited to move from cities to rural areas.

(30) How is the recent situation of agritourism?

1 The agritourism market has stopped growing in most countries.
2 People are staying longer on farms and spending more time outside.
3 More advertisements focus on city attractions instead of farms.
4 Farm stays are becoming less popular in the United States today.

(31) What do we learn from the passage?

1 Both farmers' lives and the local economy could be improved through agritourism.
2 Agritourism attracts mainly famous people who want to share their experiences online.
3 Fewer people have enjoyed spending a longer time on farms in recent years.
4 Areas where agritourism takes place often face negative reactions from the locals.
